

“One is struck by the penetration of economic power, its ubiquitous presence, but also by its limits and indeed by its inferiority as compared to the power of the state.”

Fritz Stern, Gold and Iron,

p. xvii